

Sol2Sol: The Indigenous and POC-led alternative to the Global Climate Action Summit

By ROSE AGUILAR & ANDREW STELZER • SEP 10, 2018

This week, California Governor Jerry Brown is co-chairing the Global Climate Action Summit in San Francisco, which is bringing together business executives and politicians to discuss solutions to climate change. Many grassroots activists say the summit is too focused on market based approaches that do not prioritize people on the front lines, especially people of color and indigenous communities.

They're hosting a parallel gathering called Solidarity to Solutions. We'll speak with Sol2Sol participants from across the country about the movement for climate justice.

Guests:

Maya Bhardwaj, It Takes Roots coordinator at the Grassroots Global Justice Alliance

Denise Abdul-Rahman, NAACP Indiana Environmental Climate Justice Chair

Darryl Molina, executive director of Communities for a Better Environment

Web Resources:

Sol2Sol

Global Climate Action Summit

Indigenous Environmental Network

This Could Be the Moment World Governments Chart a Path Toward Tackling Climate Change